Wilson told the operators and miners that the people of the United States were not "shylocks" and no not want to exact "the technical exactions of a bond" when the considerations under which the bond was made have changed. He continued that if any great change is made in the contracts, the people of the United States are the ones who will have to pay, and chroughout his remarks emphasized the public interest in the coal settlement.

oasis.

After hearing Secretary Wilson, the conference adjourned until 10 oclock tomorrow to permit the miners and operators to discuss separately the plan which would be most acceptable to each.

Indications of a conflict on the scope of the agreement to be negotiated involving the question of recognition of nonunion workers developed at the outset of the conference, and became more paparent in the two group meetings which followed.

Scope of Conference Discussed.

Discussion in the miners' caucus, which followed the conference session, inged on the question whether operators representing both union and nonunion fields would be included in the conference, and the effect any greement reached by the conference might have in those fields where the miners do not have contracts with the operators. Although officers of the United Mine Workers refused to make the time of the conference was favored, the conference was favored, but before any proposal is agreed to Secretary Wilson will be asked to make clear to the conference that the rights of organized labor are to be protected in those districts where the miners' inlong are not recognized by the coal companies.

The operators, however, did not look with favor on any agreement covering the fields. The Washington wage treement, for the first time, the operators asserted, fixed the same date or the expiration of contracts between miners and operators in all parts of the country. Fear of the power this arrangement gives the workers to bring about a nation-wide strike was expressed by the operators, who indicated a desire to return to the old plan of basing all wage scale contracts on the agreement reached in the central competitive fields.
